To Kill A Mocking Bird

In "To kill a Mockingbird" Harper Lee used Boo Radley as a shy but thoughtful person and he represents the mind of adults towards people that was misunderstood. In Maycomb people judged Boo Radley as an evil and horrible person because his father Mr. Radley had once committed a crime. But at the end of the novel the readers will then realized Boo Radley was not a bad person but he was actually extremely shy.

At the start of the novel Scout thinks Boo Radley was a mean and a blood thirsty person because people in Maycomb county Judged Boo from his father's reputation. He was described by Maycomb to be rotten and bloody and we can tell from the evidence given on page 19 "Boo was about six and a half feet tall, judging from his tracks; he dined on raw squirrels and any cats he could catch, that's why his hands were blood stained... There was a long jagged scar that ran across his face; what teeth he had were yellow and rotten; his eyes popped, and he drooled most of the time." This quote was from Jem which had grown up hearing these rumors about him in the town. But at the end of the novel, Scout realized Boo was actually a nice man and she also said he was one of their neighbors "His lips parted into a timid smile and our neighbour's image blurred with my sudden tears. 'Hey, Boo,' I said." Page 276 Scout realized Boo Radley was a nice and generous person but he was just extremely shy, so at the end of the novel as Scout led Boo out she called him Mr. Arthur because she want to let him know that he is different from his father.

Boo Radley was a shy person but he really want to make friends with people so he started to put presents and helping Jem and Scout in secret. And when Scout found out what he Boo Radley had done for them she felt guilty. "Neighbours bring food a with death and flowers with sickness and a little thing in between. Boo was our neighbor he gave us two soup dolls a broken watch and chain, a pair of good luck pennies, and our lives. But neighbours give in return. We never put back into the tree what we took out of it; we had given him nothing, and it made me sad." Page 284 Boo was always given but not receiving but he seems to be really happy about it, but Scout thinks that they owe Boo Radley a lot because he has give them presents and help them when they are in trouble but most of all he saved their lives.

One of the Mockingbird in the novel is Boo Radley, because he was innocent but the town want him to do things against his will. We can tell from the evidence given to prove Atticus was trying to help him by not telling the town. "Scout he said, 'Mr. Ewell fell on his knife. Can you possibly understand?'... 'Yes sir, I understand,' I reassured him. 'Mr Tate was right.' Atticus disengaged himself and looked at me 'What do you mean?' 'Well, it'd be sort of like shootin' a mockingbird, wouldn't it?' Page 282 As the readers all know, Boo Radley killed Mr. Ewell but because telling the whole town about this will go against Boo's will and he will hate it they decided not to tell the town. So basically Boo is the Mockingbird, and telling the town about what he had done for Scout and Jem is the trigger to kill him.

try to explain how it would affect him.

The characteristic of Boo Radley is shy, and he does not want to share any good and heroic things he had done. "I never heard tell that it's against the law for a citizen to do his utmost to prevent crime from being committed, which is exactly what he did, but maybe you'll say it's my duty to tell the town all about and it's not hush it up. Know what'd happen then? All the ladies in Maycomb includin' my wife'd be knocking on his door bringing angel food cakes. To my way into the limelight – to me, that's a sin. It's a sin and I'm not about to have it on my head. If it was any other man it'd be different. But not this man, Mr. Finch." Page 282 Mr. Tate did that because he does not want Boo Radley to suffer from the sudden burst of popularity since he knows Boo is shy and doesn't want to attract attention in the town so Mr. Tate persuaded Atticus to not tell the town about his heroine heroism.

Boo Radley is a innocent and pure hearted person which deserve nothing bad in his life, he saved Jem and Scout. He gave them presents and he mended their ^{clothes} clothes. Harper Lee used Boo as a character that showed the minds of people in her times, she showed even though a person is lonely and shy but they still deserve to receive and give from and to others. Boo was a strong character in the novel, Boo was the mockingbird.
